

Kershaw Gardens

Rockhampton

Rockhampton's Kershaw Gardens were officially opened in September 1988 as part of a project celebrating the Australian Bicentenary. Initial development of the gardens commenced in 1976, on an old landfill reclamation area. Today, the Gardens represent a natural Australian bush environment, in contrast to the more formal style of traditional Botanic Gardens.

These magnificent gardens stretch for one kilometre along the Bruce Highway and provide an attractive, peaceful setting within the heart of Rockhampton. The park is an impressive 21 hectares.

The Kershaw Gardens has an impressive waterfall, lit at night, on the main road through Rockhampton.

In addition to the rainforest setting, the garden has a scented garden and the slab hut, which includes native flower arrangements.

The gardens have become a tranquil setting for all walks of life to enjoy with its paved walking paths, wheelchair access, rest areas, drinking fountains and easy parking.

Access to this location: Moores Creek Rd, North Rockhampton. Carpark open from 7am to 6pm.
